INVENTOR COMPOSER ENTREPRENEUR EDUCATOR

After a successful corporate career as a technologist with Fortune 500 companies like Paramount Pictures, Sony and Pfizer, Mr. Fentress' life changed during a 45-day period where he faced a divorce, September 11th and a six-figure job loss. During the next eight months, Mr. Fentress returned to his love of music, teaching piano and completing his CD of original compositions Astral Waves. Then, in a moment of inspiration, he realized his life's purpose: the invention of MagneBlocks™ and the development of his business Geometix International LLC, to promote the toy and understanding of cosmic geometry (also known as the shape of nature). Those principles and more can be found in MagneBlocks™, which has been described as "a cross between Lego © and Rubik's Cube ©".

MagneBlocks™ became an instant hit among children of all ages, and a favorite of many schoolteachers as a system of manipulatives to teach architecture, design, geometry, problem solving, and spatial visualization. It's also a magnetic building block construction toy, perfect for exploring creativity and imagination. Currently selling in eleven countries including Austria, England, France, Germany, Mexico, Russia, South Africa, South Korea, Switzerland and the US, MagneBlocks™ has become an Oppenheim Toy Portfolio Gold Award winner, and was voted one of the top 10 educational toys of 2005 by NBC's Today Show. They can be found on Target.com, MagneBlocks.com, and select stores nationwide.

Mr. Fentress currently runs Geometix International, lectures at schools and events, and even finds time occasionally to perform music with his band Seven.
